ABSTRACT

A review of the literature on the study of terminology began long before its scientific comprehension and the development of criteria for the attribution of certain units to terminological vocabulary. As noted by M.A. Chigashev, these processes took place isomorphically to the spontaneous emergence and evolution of denotations and their corresponding concepts, and on the basis of the general literary language, which allows us to consider the terminology exactly as part of its lexical-semantic system.

Keywords: Terminology, lexical system, term, word.
